

ABSTRACT

A method that limits data flow between two network nodes to an amount within a window where a first portion of data within a first segment of the window is 5 separated from a second portion of data within a second segment of the window by a third portion of data not within the window.

006260" 04042960